BOARD OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS THANK LOCAL BUSINESSES

WELD COUNTY, CO – This past week, the Weld County Board of Commissioners sent more than 300 letters to primary business owners throughout the county. The letter, which was sent to business owners who employ 25 or more people, is part of an annual outreach program between the Commissioners and the Weld County business community. The letters thank business owners for choosing Weld County as their location for operation and remind companies that Weld County strives to be business friendly.

“The letter is a proactive way to say thank you to the businesses that made the decision to call Weld County home,” said Chairman Sean Conway.

The letter states, in part: “Your company performs a vital role in furthering the growth and development of our county. Thank you for your creativity and innovation. We certainly want to continue to partner with you to ensure continued future success.

It is our pleasure to recognize you as a leader in our community who provides jobs to many of our citizens. We appreciate the efforts you put forth to create your business in our community.”
