VISITORS TO DISCOVER WELD GENERATE MORE THAN 1,800 PAGE VIEWS IN FIRST MONTH

JUNE UPDATE TO FEATURE MINERS, TIGERS AND SPUDNUTS

WELD COUNTY, CO – Visitors to the new Discover Weld web site generated more than 1,800 page views during the month of May – when the site debuted.

“We are happy to see the interest in Discover Weld,” said Commissioner Chairman William Garcia. “With new stories being added each month, we hope the site becomes a resource for the public to learn about the great things Weld County has to offer.”

Featured stories for June include:

The Wild Animal Sanctuary, located in Keenesburg, is home to more than 300 large carnivores including lions, tigers, bears and wolves. Thanks to Sanctuary founder Pat Craig, these animals have been rescued from dire conditions and are experiencing a second chance at a new and better life in Weld County.

Red's Dogs and Donuts is home to the only place in Colorado that sells the Spudnut donut. Located in Greeley, Red's has brought back the beloved potato-flour donut much to the delight of people across the Front Range. Learn why people drive for miles just to get a taste of a potato donut.

Miners' Memorial Museum, located in Frederick, highlights southern Weld County's rich coal mining history. Displays and artifacts illustrate for visitors what mining in Weld County was like at the turn of the century.

Also new to the site this month are links to municipal events calendars, an index and photos submitted by the public.
