WELD COUNTY COMMISSIONERS RECOGNIZE BOARD MEMBERS FOR SERVICE

WELD COUNTY, CO – On Monday, the Weld County Board of Commissioners recognized Planning Commission At-Large Representative Jason Maxey, Board of Adjustments member Jerry Neff, Board of Public Health member Fred Hepner and Community Corrections Board Member Charles (C.J.) Archibeque for their voluntary commitment of time and accomplishments as a board member.

At-Large Representative Jason Maxey served on the Weld County Planning Commission for the past six years. During that time, he was the Chairman of the Commission for two years as well as the Vice Chair for one year. The Planning Commission’s primary mission is land use planning for individual parcels of land, and how the use of that land affects the surrounding area and community.

“Jason did a great job representing Weld County,” said Commissioner Steve Moreno, coordinator for the Department of Planning Services. “He was always fair and respectful to residents, and he took his position very seriously.”

Jerry Neff was as a Regular Member under District Two for the Department of Planning Services Board of Adjustments. For eight years, Neff assisted in reviewing cases and provided a solid vote during hearings. The Board of Adjustments conducts hearings and decides appeals from decisions concerning the administration or enforcement of the Weld County Zoning Ordinance. The Board also interprets the location of zoning district boundaries and lot lines.

“Jerry has been an outstanding member to the Board of Adjustments,” said Commissioner Sean Conway. “The commissioners appreciate his many years of service.”

For the past eight years, Fred Hepner has been a member of the Weld County Board of Public Health. As a Board Member, Hepner approved biosolid applications, reviewed and renewed septic permits and listened to presentations from departments within Public Health.

“This board is very technical and requires many hours of research,” said Commissioner Mike Freeman, coordinator for the Department of Public Health and Environment. “Fred did a great job assisting not only his fellow board members but also the residents of Weld County, and we thank him for all his hard work.”

C.J. Archibeque was appointed by the commissioners as a Citizen Representative on the Community Board.

Corrections Board for the last seven years. The Community Corrections Board provides a sentencing option for the court to place felony-convicted offenders in a staff-secure residential program instead of prison, or as a means by the Department of Corrections for the reentry of an inmate to the community prior to parole. While on the board, C.J. screened offenders for placement and provided general oversight of community corrections programs in Weld County.

“C.J. made a significant impact on the people he worked with,” said Commissioner Julie Cozad. “He has been a role model, and we know he will continue to be a positive community member.”
