COUNTY LAUNCHES SERVICE TO DELIVER WCR 49 UPDATES TO SUBSCRIBERS

WELD COUNTY, CO – As the county continues work on the Weld County Road (WCR) 49 Corridor project, it has enlisted the service of GovDelivery to share project updates and information with residents. New to the county home page is a subscription button that allows users to enter an email address or cell phone number to which they would like to receive updates and notifications.

“Instead of asking people to come to our web site or social media sites to search for updates, the GovDelivery service will allow us to send updates directly to their email box or cell phone as a text link,” said Commissioner Chair Barbara Kirkmeyer. “We are also able to use this service to send Discover Weld updates and newsletters.”

The WCR 49 Corridor project is the largest road construction project in the county’s history and consists of two primary facets: the WCR 49 Parkway project, which will extend WCR 49 north from Highway 34 to WCR 60.5; and the WCR 49 Corridor project which includes enhancements to WCR 49 south from Highway 34 to Interstate 76.

“This project will take a few years to complete,” said Commissioner Sean Conway, coordinator for the Public Works Department, “and we want to make sure we share regular updates with those who live along the corridor, travel the corridor, or are just interested in this road project in general.”

While information about the project will still be available on the county’s web site, the GovDelivery service will make sure those who sign up for the subscription won’t miss any updates as the information will be delivered directly to the subscriber.

To sign up for the updates, please go to www.weldgov.com and fill out the information in the box labeled “Digital Updates.”
